

The screenshot shows a Microsoft Word document with a dark background. The title 'Communication in adults with intellectual disabilities' is at the top. Below it, the author's name 'M. Coppens-Hofman' is listed. The main text discusses a study involving two groups: one receiving a group-based intervention and another as a control group. The intervention group showed significant improvements in speech, articulation, and auditory discrimination. The document is presented in a Microsoft Word interface with various toolbars and a ribbon menu.